Rangel challenger questions victory

HARLEM. The race for Rep. Charles Rangel's seat appeared to get more complicated yesterday, after state Sen. Adriano Espaillat said the race was tighter than previously thought. Rangel won according to data last week, but Espaillat said that after delayed counting, it is a much closer race. Espaillat told reporters he received reports of voters turned away at the polls. Jay is a shih tzu mix that is 9 years young waiting for his new family to take him home. He is a friendly little guy who likes pretty much everyone. His left eye was blind and had to be surgically removed, but he doesn't seem to mind. His good eye has to be kept healthy with prescription eye ointment, but that shouldn't prevent him from living a happy life! He is well mannered, especially when the reward is a tasty treat. The couch is this dog's favorite place to be, and he prefers to spend his time there with considerate adults with dog-owning experience. METRO

News in brief

Cops search for Manhattan robbers

MURRAY HILL. Police are looking for a man involved in two burglaries from a restaurant basement on Third Avenue near 39th Street Saturday. Officials say the man broke in shortly before 4 a.m. at the building, shared by a pizzeria and chicken restaurant. He damaged property but did not take anything, cops said. The suspect is described as a bald man, between 6-foot and 6-foot-2, weighing 180 to 190 pounds and with tattoos on both arms. He was least seen wearing dark jeans, dark sneakers and a blue or gray tank top. METRO/DB

Woman sues city after alleged assault

BRONX. A Bronx woman is suing the city for allegedly dismissing a sex assault by a mentally ill man while she was in the hospital, the Daily News reported yesterday. Hilda Polanco said she now suffers depression and sleeplessness since she awoke in the middle of the night at Lincoln Hospital to a mentally ill man grabbing her inappropriately. The man was given a desk ticket for harassment, according to the Daily News. METRO/DB

Coney Island flush with funds for rides, not residential areas

City funnels cash into Coney Island revitalization But all local residents see are new roller coasters, not retail spots or apartments

When crowds throng Coney Island for the annual Nathan's hot dog-eating contest Wednesday, they'll find the new — the "Scream Zone" roller coaster — and the old, like Denny's ice cream.

It's all part of the remaking of the Brooklyn beachfront that began in 2003, when the city launched a rezoning process to transform the area.

But it's easy to forget that the amusement district was never the main target of the rezoning. The focus was to the west of the rides, where the city promised to bring mixed-use housing and retail towers to vacant lots.

Hopes for more jobs

- If the market for Coney condos never recovers, then taxpayers would save the hundreds of millions of dollars it would take to build that infrastructure.
- But it would also mean the death of hopes that the rezoning might ultimately produce jobs for the impoverished blocks to the west, a cul-de-sac known as the West End with some of the highest unemployment rates in the city.

Three years later, though, there is little sign of the condo messiah arriving anytime soon.

Construction on a single apartment building on the boardwalk at West 32nd Street began two winters ago, but remains unfinished. Nearby, Coney Island Commons, a mixed-income co-op complex, has blown past its original summer 2009 target completion date and is now slated for an opening in 2013.

In lots rezoned for new development, meanwhile, a plywood-bedecked single-story building is the only sign of new construction.

Some of this, no doubt, can be blamed on the collapse of the housing bubble. Yet even if demand for beachfront condos rebounded tomorrow, residents warn that it would still take years, if not decades, of sewer and electrical upgrades before Bloomberg's residential dreams could become reality.

An EDC spokesperson defended the city's plans as practical and said that three years into the 30-year plan, "Significant progress has already been made." NEIL DEMAUSE

CONTRIBUTED BY CITY LIMITS

Estimating a decades-long wait in Coney

The city's Economic Development Corporation, in charge of the rezoning, has a 30-year plan for redevelopment. The first phase of infrastructure upgrades — a set of new storm sewers and ungraded sanitary pipes along West 15th Street and a short stretch of Surf Avenue — is currently in the design phase, with a target completion date of 2015. In surrounding blocks, the city estimates the design phase will last until 2022. But the peninsula's infrastructure needs, according to locals, go far beyond those few square blocks. Says community board 13's district manager Chuck Reichenthal, "You can't put up high-rise hotels, buildings or anything else, when what exists now has flooding problems."

The city's Independent Budget Office projects a total city expense of $277 million on capital projects through 2013 in Coney Island.

$140M

Add in the $140 million budgeted by Department of Environmental Protection for sewer work, and the total price tag could reach $417 million.

Parents wary of roaming Elmos

Elmo might approach with a shaggy red suit and friendly wave — but some parents are now wondering who is inside those oversized suits beckoning their children.

Last week, a man in an Elmo suit was reportedly kicked out of Central Park after screaming obscenities. He was taken away in an ambulance, and later told The New York Times his pre-Elmo career included running a pornographic site in Cambodia.

Around the city, in tourist hot spots like Times Square, Elmos — and other giant puppets like Cookie Monster and Hello Kitty — beckon families for photos, offering a quick pose with a furry smile for a buck.

But unlike other sidewalk standards who collect cash, like street vendors, the city does not license or monitor puppets who pose for pictures.

"Generally these characters are engaging in First Amendment activities and do not need a license," Sheryl Neufeld at the City Law Department told Metro in a statement.

"These people are whoever can find a suit and rent a suit for a day. ... How do you know who's decent?" HEIDI FLANAGAN

If the Elmos are interfering with the sidewalk, police can tell them to move, she added, and failing to obey police can become disorderly conduct.

In Times Square yesterday, about 10 puppeted people shook bags filled with bills at tourists. None would speak with a Metro reporter.

Park Slope mom Heidi Flanagan told Metro she was surprised to hear that no one tracks or approves the Elmos.

MILES DIXON

▶ An Elmo collects cash yesterday in Times Square.

"It could be anyone," she said. "Even a hot dog vendor needs a license."

Her 7-year-old daughter, now over Elmo, used to want to say hello, she said. "I never let her go up to them," she said.

Whether underneath the oversized head is a squeaky-clean background or criminal past, she said they shouldn't roam free on city streets.

"Anybody that's dressed up in a suit that's clearly for kids … should be monitored," she said.

But mom Kate Harrison wasn't bothered, saying, "I would never leave one of my kids alone with an Elmo or Mickey Mouse, so I guess it doesn't trouble me more than the risk of the average person."

Residents want nude beach fenced off from families

QUEENS. Rockaway residents are demanding the restoration of fence that had once separated the nude beach in Riis Park from the Neponsit family beach next door, according to the Daily News. Protestors and nude beach goers each pointed the finger at each other for behaving inappropriately, reported the paper. While the city has the ultimate say in whether or not to put the fence back up, John Warren, public affairs officer for the Gateway National Recreation Area, said that their department had no interest in restoring the fence. "You should be able to walk from public beach to public beach without a fence in the way," Warren said. METRO/DB

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. The family of a retired marine who was killed by police last year filed a $21 million lawsuit yesterday against the city of White Plains, N.Y., and the officers involved, according to the Daily News. Kenneth Chamberlain Sr., 68, was killed in November when police ignored his drunken pleas to be left alone, reported the Daily News. The officer who fired the shot that killed Chamberlain was not charged. METRO/DB

Comptroller Liu fined $500K

NEW YORK. The city's Environmental Control Board upheld a decision requiring Comptroller John Liu to pay $527,400 for covering the city in thousands of illegal campaign posters in 2009, according to the New York Post. Liu's lawyers told the paper that they hadn't decided whether to pay the fine or file an appeal. METRO/DB

The Perfect Weekend Getaway

My friends and I have spent a lot of our time in search of the perfect weekend getaway. Over the years, we've taken trips to the Hamptons and Fire Island, camping weekends upstate, and a bike trip in Vermont.

While each trip had its particular charms, each was somehow lacking that "perfect" vacation feel. We found the vacation we were seeking in an unlikely place... summer camp. Club Getaway, a "Camp for Grownups" on 300 acres in the Berkshire Mountains of Kent, Connecticut, provides everything we'd been looking for — plenty of cute single campers, summer activities galore and even a little romance for couples.

There is an abundance of instructed activities — trapeze, waterskiing, tennis, mountain and road biking, golf and rock climbing, to name a few.

I decide to try the trapeze for the first time. The cute, muscular instructor straps me into my harness, and before I know it, I am flying through the fresh mountain air.

Sports are not the only choices available to us. We take dance lessons, cooking classes with the Connecticut Culinary Institute, yoga, and our new favorite activity — wine tasting.

Each night is packed with party options. There are delicious dinners, live bands, dancing, even a roaring bonfire.

We managed to try kayaking, hiking, skiing, and tennis. All of our high energy activities have balanced out our unabashed consumption of cocktails, delicious food and roasted marshmallows.

We leave Club Getaway, satisfied that we have finally achieved our ideal mix of partying, healthy activities, nature, romance and fun, all rolled into one. The perfect weekend vacation.

Getaway Weekends include all meals, wine with dinner, all sports and activities, all nightly entertainment and lodging.

Club Getaway is a "Camp for Grownups" located in the Berkshire Mountains of Kent, Connecticut just 90 minutes away by car or Getaway bus.

NEW YORK. A quarter of women in a new survey admitted to deliberately posting ugly pictures of their friends to social networking sites. According to the survey by a photo gift website, Mymemory.com, the majority of women posting the photos said they did so after falling out with their friends, while nearly a third said they were taking revenge on people who had done the same to them. Two-fifths of women also admitted deliberately posting photographs of their friends without make-up. When asked to permanently delete the unflattering photo from Facebook, a fifth of women said they had refused to. METRO

SmithKline settles health care fraud case for $3 billion

JOE RAEDLE/GETTY IMAGES

▶ As part of the settlement, GlaxoSmithKline agreed to strict oversight of its sales force by the U.S. government to prevent the use of kickbacks or other prohibited practices.

GlaxoSmithKline Plc has agreed to plead guilty to misdemeanor criminal charges and pay $3 billion to settle what government officials said yesterday is the largest case of healthcare fraud in U.S. history.

The agreement, which still needs court approval, would resolve allegations that the British drugmaker broke U.S. laws in the marketing of several pharmaceuticals.

GSK targeted the antidepressant Paxil to patients under age 18 when it was approved for adults only, and it pushed the drug Wellbutrin for uses it was not approved for, including weight loss and treatment of sexual dysfunction, according to an investigation led by the U.S. Justice Department.

The company went to extreme lengths to promote the drugs, such as distributing a misleading medical journal article and providing doctors with meals and spa treatments that amounted to illegal kickbacks, prosecutors said.

In a third instance, GSK failed to give the U.S. Food and Drug Administration safety data about its diabetes drug Avandia, in violation of U.S. law, prosecutors said.

The misconduct continued for years beginning in the late 1990s and continued, in the case of Avandia's safety data, through 2007. GSK agreed to plead guilty to three misdemeanor criminal counts, one each related to the three drugs.

The agreement to settle the charges "is unprecedented in both size and scope," said James Cole, the No. 2 official at the U.S. Justice Department. He called the action "historic" and "a clear warning to any company that chooses to break the law." REUTERS

The settlement

- $1 billion in criminal fines
- $2 billion in civil fines
- Part of civil fines address allegations that, from 1994 to 2003, GSK underpaid money owed to Medicaid. The company had an obligation to tell the government its "best prices" but failed to do so.

Noble 'nuns' meet for world record

One town in southwest Ireland devoutly took a fun way to promote a serious cause. Listowel in County Kerry saw more than 1,400 men, women and children dressed in black-and-white habits to break a Guinness world record for most 'nuns' in one place, an event to raise money for Pieta House, a suicide and self-harm crisis center.

Details

- Hooray for Nunday. "Overall, Nunday was a fun way to release emotions for those who have suffered," event organizer Cora O'Brien, who lost a teenage son to suicide five years ago, told Metro. "It was great for everyone to have a bit of fun during this recession."
- As seen on TV. O'Brien recounts how she came up with the idea: "I saw a clip of TV of the largest gathering of people dressed as nuns, and I thought that would be an relatively easy event to organize so I contacted the Guinness World Records. In the local area, nuns' outfits are easy to find."
- Dress code sacrosanct. "We did have to reject a few participants," O'Brien admits. "The dress code had many stipulations, including a need for black-only shoes. The outfits were rigorously checked, and people were ticketed as they entered the field."

The number of men, women and children who dressed up as nuns and gathered in a Gaelic football field in Listowel on Saturday. It smashed the previous record of 250 achieved at Pinewood Studios, Buckinghamshire, England. The organizing committee initially hoped only 500 would attend.

Kim pledges to help poor as he takes World Bank reins

Korean-American physician Jim Yong Kim took the reins of the poverty-fighting World Bank yesterday and pledged to protect developing countries at a pivotal moment for a world economy that appears to be losing steam rapidly.

Kim, former head of Dartmouth College in New Hampshire, takes the presidency at a time the euro zone debt crisis is beginning to exact a wider global toll.

Growth is slowing in emerging economies from China to India to Brazil, with developing countries feeling the effects of tighter bank lending and a drop in trade financing — problems Kim will have to address as the head of the world's top development lender.

"I am both humbled and inspired to take over today as president," Kim told reporters before he entered the World Bank's headquarters just blocks away from the White House.

Kim's nomination for the job by the Obama administration was challenged by candidates from developing countries. It was the first time in the World Bank's history that the U.S. hold on the job was challenged by nations who want an opportunity to lead the institution.

Unlike previous heads of the World Bank, Kim is not a politician, banker or career diplomat. Instead, his life work has focused on bringing health care to the poor, whether fighting tuberculosis in Haiti and Peru or tackling HIV/AIDS in Russian prisons.

In an e-mail reaching out to the World Bank's staff, Kim said his priority was to intensify the bank's efforts to help developing countries protect growth and jobs.

"The global economy remains vulnerable," Kim said in the e-mail. "The Bank Group stands ready to support countries as they design and implement longer-range strategies for sustainable, inclusive growth." REUTERS

Helping rich, too

Kim said yesterday he was open to the possibility of the development institution providing technical expertise to address structural problems in developed nations like Greece. Such a move would be a major shift for the poverty-fighting institution that has only focused on helping developing countries since its inception after World War II.

Wife: Husband is innocent

NEW YORK. Kari Bales, the wife of a U.S. Army staff sergeant charged with killing 16 villagers in Afghanistan in March, said yesterday she continues to believe her husband is innocent and that "I don't think that anyone really knows what happened."

But she also said she has not asked Robert Bales, her husband of seven years who is charged by the U.S. military with 16 counts of murder in the March 11 mass shooting, what happened on that day.

"I just don't need to ask him. I know my husband, and it's not a question I really need to ask. I know him," she told the "CBS This Morning" program. REUTERS

Manufacturing shrinks in June

NEW YORK. Manufacturing shrank in June for the first time in nearly three years as new orders plummeted, providing a sign of the economic recovery's slowdown. It was the first time since July 2009 that the index has fallen below the mark that separates expansion from contraction. REUTERS

Strongest evidence yet of God particle

Physicists at Fermi National Accelerator Lab said yesterday that they have come tantalizingly close to proving the existence of the elusive subatomic Higgs boson — dubbed the "God particle" because it brings mass and order to the universe.

But the debris from trillions of collisions between beams of protons and anti-protons over 10 years at Fermilab's now-shuttered Tevatron accelerator outside Chicago still fell short of the scientific threshold proving the discovery. The same collision debris hinting at the existence of the Higgs could also come from other subatomic particles.

"This is the best answer that is out there at the moment."
ROB ROSER, FERMILAB PHYSICIST

The power to confer mass seemed to endow the Higgs with the power of creation itself, which helped lead to its nickname "the God particle."

Tomorrow, physicists at CERN, the European particle accelerator near Geneva, are scheduled to announce their own findings in the Higgs hunt. CERN houses the world's most powerful particle accelerator, the Large Hadron Collider.

"The Tevatron data strongly point toward the existence of the Higgs boson, but it will take results from the experiments at the Large Hadron Collider in Europe to establish a firm discovery," said physicist Rob Roser of Fermilab. REUTERS

▶ Buildings sit along the ocean in Miami-Dade County; reports showed that, in the future, this could be one of the most susceptible places when it comes to rising water levels.

Rise in sea level can't be stopped, scientists say

Rising sea levels cannot be stopped over the next several hundred years, even if deep emissions cuts lower global average temperatures — but they can be slowed down, climate scientists said in a study released yesterday.

A lot of climate research claims that rising greenhouse gas emissions are responsible for increasing global average surface temperatures by about 0.17 degrees Celsius a decade from 1980-2010 and for a sea level rise of about 2.3mm a year from 2005-2010 as ice caps and glaciers melt.

Rising sea levels threaten about a tenth of the world's population that lives in low-lying areas and islands which are at risk of flooding, including the Caribbean, Maldives and Asia-Pacific island groups.

Even if global average temperatures fall and surface layer of the sea cools, heat would still be mixed down into the deeper layers of the ocean, causing continued rises in sea levels, the new study said. REUTERS

New McDonald's boss switches from beef to chicken

JOHANNES SIMON/GETTY IMAGES

▶ The chain has introduced chicken wraps in Europe.

McDonald's Corp.'s new chief executive officer is playing chicken with the menu.

As Don Thompson, 49, steps into the CEO role at the world's largest restaurant chain, customers may see more new chicken items instead of beef. Thompson is pulling from McDonald's 160-item recipe book, which includes bone-in chicken wings and cashew teriyaki salads with chicken, to sell new food and attract cash-conscious consumers amid a shaky global economy. It's a "tremendous opportunity," Thompson said during a consumer conference on May 30.

"Some great examples include our large wrap in Europe and snack items like Chicken McBites," he said. "Our customers have given us permission to stretch our brand, so we are entering new categories with new products."

"Some great examples include our large wrap in Europe and snack items like Chicken McBites."
DON THOMPSON, MCDONALD'S CEO

McDonald's is looking to draw budget-minded Americans with chicken items, which can be priced lower than other proteins, according to Bryan Elliott, an analyst at Raymond James & Associates in St. Petersburg, Florida. "The consumer is expressing some recent signs of distress" and chicken costs are "cheap relative to beef right now by a lot," he said. McDonald's, along with other fast-food operators, is facing government austerity programs in Europe, declining consumer confidence in the U.S. and slowing economic growth in Asia.

US Bancorp settles overdraft fee case for $55 million

Fourteen lenders have settled, according to lawyers for the customers.

US Bancorp, one of the 10 largest U.S. banks, has agreed to pay $55 million to settle lawsuits accusing it of imposing excessive overdraft fees on customers.

The settlement by the Minneapolis-based lender was revealed yesterday, six days after a $90 million accord with similarly-sized PNC Financial Services Group Inc. was announced.

It is part of nationwide customer litigation against 35 lenders over the fees, which are typically assessed when customers overdraw their checking accounts by using debit cards.

Brought on behalf of millions of customers, the lawsuits accused banks of ordering transactions from largest to smallest, rather than processing them in chronological order. They said this let banks charge overdraft fees, which are typically $25 to $35, sooner and more often because account balances fell faster.

Holmes finally freaked out by Scientologists

The average high-profile celebrity divorce provides us with maybe four days of gossip — give or take, depending on if they made us sit through a reality show documenting their fairy-tale wedding.

But this Katie Holmes and Tom Cruise split is shaping up to be the gift (and/or curse) that keeps on giving (but more likely, taking).

It seems Holmes had more than some vague inkling that Scientology wasn't the church she wanted her daughter, Suri, to grow up in. "Every move she made and everything she did was controlled," a source tells UsMagazine.com. "She felt like she was in 'Rosemary's Baby.' She felt she had to get out to save her daughter."

While we always detected an SOS signal in Holmes' eyes, she decided to file for divorce when Cruise wanted to ship Suri off to a Scientology offshoot known as the Sea Organization, sources tell TMZ. Part indoctrination boot camp, part pure Boy Scout kitsch, the Sea Org is effectively the Scientology mothership, an elite military-style sect that requires members to sign one-billion-year contracts and wear Navy-inspired uniforms on campus. (Think Catholic school with more spaceships, less enchanted arks.)

▶ Suri Cruise and Katie Holmes

"Katie and Tom have very different parenting views," another source tells UsMagazine.com. "Katie wants Suri to go to school with other children and have a grounded routine."

This one is really setting the bar high for "irreconcilable differences." What are the rest of us supposed to say when we get bored and see something shiny in the distance?

You can't shake us, Anderson Cooper

Apparently, Anderson Cooper wasn't officially out yet.

"The fact is, I'm gay, always have been, always will be, and I couldn't be any more happy, comfortable with myself, and proud," the journalist — with visible abs, we'd like to point out — tells the Daily Beast.

As for the announcement, Cooper felt it was time to go on record. "There continue to be far too many incidences of bullying of young people, as well as discrimination and violence against people of all ages, based on their sexual orientation, and I believe there is value in making clear where I stand," he says.

We commend you, Anderson — but don't think this will stop us from making inappropriate comments about those crystal blue eyes of yours.

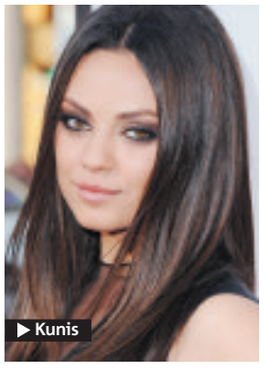
Beyonce strikes a pose

We're going to let Beyonce have the last word on showing some major leg on stage. The singer accepted the award for Best Female R&B Artist at Sunday night's BET Awards, and, unlike Angelina Jolie, didn't come close to creeping us out.

Talking points

Tell us about it, boys

Matthew McConaughey had some trouble getting used to the costumes required for "Magic Mike." "It's a huge leap of faith to trust a thong," he tells the Hollywood Reporter. "It's your only protection up onstage. When I first tried it on, my body contorted. And I tried to get myself into every position to see what angles I was covering." His costar, Channing Tatum, agrees. "Sometimes a thong completely betrays you," adds Tatum. "[But] if everyone is dressed in a thong, pretty much any conversation is going to be funny. It's only weird if you make it weird."



▶ Kunis

Mila Kunis is an online dating pro

Mila Kunis cruises online dating sites, but she's not looking for herself. "I go on and I pick the guys for my friends," the star of "Ted" tells Glamour magazine. "It's online shopping! We all get together with our laptops and have a glass of wine. Then we message the guy. I'm just very honest and blunt." And she rewrites profiles, too: "I'm really good at 'About Me,'" she says. "I feel like I could never write anything about myself, because that's like a therapy session. But about your girlfriends? You just write what you love about your friends. If I didn't do what I do, I would do Internet dating instead of going out to bars. It makes so much more sense."

Happy belated, Lindsay Lohan!

Lindsay Lohan turned 26 yesterday, but she started the party early with a night out at Hollywood club Bootsy Bellows on Sunday. While there were cupcakes and dancing, the actress — who has been on good behavior while filming an Elizabeth Taylor biopic — appeared to keep it low-key. "There was a ton of alcohol at Lindsay's table; however, she didn't appear to be drinking," a source tells UsMagazine.com.

A super 'Spider-Man'

The new take on the Spider-Man story is saved from schlock by its charismatic couple But it doesn't evade every blockbuster pitfall

"The Amazing Spider-Man"
Director: Marc Webb
Cast: Andrew Garfield, Emma Stone
Rating: PG-13 Grade: ❶❷❸❹❺

The first thing many of us thought when we heard there was a Spider-Man reboot afoot was, "What? Why?" Well, Marvel actually makes a good case for this new iteration to exist. We have Tobey Maguire replaced by Andrew Garfield and Kirsten Dunst, as Mary Jane Watson, replaced by Emma Stone as Peter Parker's lesser-known girlfriend, Gwen Stacy. Even though we only last saw Spidey five years ago in Sam Raimi's third installment with Maguire and Dunst, Garfield and Stone use their unique charisma to make the story their own. Given that these two have been dating offscreen as well, the chemistry we see between them is powerful.

Considering the director hired to direct this Spidey, Marc Webb, was the man behind the tender indie rom-com, "(500) Days of Summer" it's clear that this isn't going to be a "Transformers" sort of show, where bad CGI has the starring role. Webb's emphasis on relationships makes the whole superhero thing almost tastefully understated. The rest of the cast, too, makes it look effortless, with Rhys Ifans as Dr. Curt Connors and Sally Field and Martin Sheen as Peter Parker's aunt and uncle.

JAIMIE TRUEBLOOD

▶ These two make a new "Spider-Man" worth watching.

But every comic book movie must have those elements that say "we spent billions on this, so let's make sure everyone on the planet can follow it." There are some major gaps in logic and the occasional bonehead plot point (for example, The Lizard discovering who has been following him by conveniently finding a camera marked "Property of Peter Parker.") There are, also, those bad puns shouted by a masked Spidey as he web-traps a baddie, and silly one-liners uttered while he's swinging from building to building. But it is what it is. Falling within the conventions of the superhero movie, this one demands some respect — and we'll give it.

No guts, no grace, no glory

Chris Cleave pits woman against woman, but not in the petty way that sells tabloids or spikes reality TV ratings. In his novel "Gold," two venerable Olympic track cyclists vie for one spot to compete on the international stage. Outside of the velodrome, they race to survive. While Kate saddles up to the trials of motherhood — sacrificing fame to keep her leukemic daughter's white blood cell count in check — Zoe pedals to beat her traumatic past.

In spite of their differences — and a harrowing shared secret — these rivals bring out the best out in each other. "There's no way that [athletes] could be as good individually if there wasn't someone else always hard at their heels," Cleave argues. "And when they retire from sport, their greatest rival could easily become their best friend, because they know each other better than anyone else."

From start to photo finish, "Gold" pulses with intensity and heart. We spoke to Cleave about feeling the force.

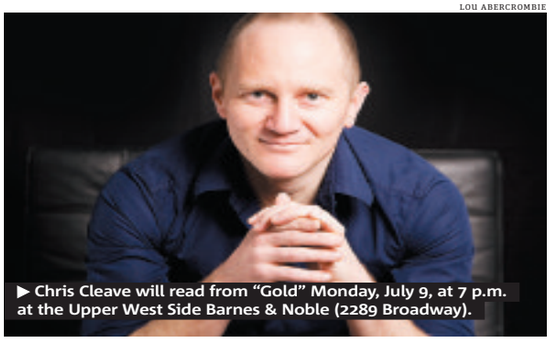
You, too, are a cyclist. Does writing to you feel the way racing does to your protagonists?
Before "Gold," I'd been an averagely fit recreational cyclist and while I was researching it, I trained really hard. I wanted to know in my body what it felt like to win, to lose and to race without holding anything back. And I'm not a high-level competitor now, but I'm really keen. There's a huge parallel between being a writer and a cyclist. A novel is a long-distance endurance game, and you have to have the same kind of tenacity to do it.

Women — and not just in sport — harbor complicated body image issues. In addition to researching the physical effects of racing, how did you tap into the female psyche?
Female athletes have to do and prove so much more than male athletes. When women are reaching the top of their game in their mid-20s to early 30s, society is also asking: are you going to settle down and have children? They have to make more sacrifices. And society wants female athletes to be really attractive in a way that it doesn't demand of male athletes. There's a double standard.

That's why I got interested in researching and interviewing female athletes. I broadly categorized the people I met into two types: one that is single-minded and didn't have much of a life outside of the sport and another who has a strong personal life as a foundation for their sporting achievements. It was interesting how each coped with having to perform. The people who impressed me most saw rivalry as just another kind of friendship.

How do you tackle grave subjects like pediatric cancer without getting too caught up emotionally or sentimental?
In "Gold," I'm asking which is more important: our ambitions or our love? I went through highs and lows while writing, trying to answer that question. That's why I'm a writer — to experience the emotions I'm writing about and to come out on the other side changed by them. Being close to your own emotional life is difficult and quite brave. There is a tendency in modern life to be cynical. Life isn't just a joke; for most people it's an epic struggle. I like to acknowledge the emotive reality of that.

LOU ABERCROMBIE



▶ Chris Cleave will read from "Gold" Monday, July 9, at 7 p.m. at the Upper West Side Barnes & Noble (2289 Broadway).

Q&A

What are your thoughts on the upcoming Olympics?
I'm excited — the greatest show on Earth is coming to my hometown! I wanted to tell the backstory. For example, the final of the 100-meter sprint lasts 10 seconds. But what we're witnessing [when we watch it] is the last 10 seconds of a four-year battle. I'm interested in the three years, 364 days, 23 hours, 59 minutes and 59 seconds [prior].

3 New Cocktails for your Fourth

Celebrate your independence from the keg with these three unique cocktails

Fizzy and sweet

Raspberry Bohemia Cocktail

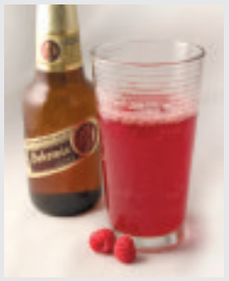
This beer cocktail from Chef Rick Bayless makes for a good daytime sip that won't leave you feeling woozy by the time the fireworks start.

Ingredients

- 1½ cans (12 ounces each) frozen raspberry juice concentrate, thawed
- ¾ cup freshly squeezed lime juice
- 6 bottles (12 ounces each) Bohemia beer
- Chilled fresh raspberries

Directions

▶ Mix undiluted raspberry juice concentrate with lime juice in a pitcher. Refrigerate. When ready to serve, pour about ⅓ cup of the raspberry mixture into chilled beer glasses. Top with chilled Bohemia. Garnish with raspberries. Makes six cocktails.



BOHEMIA BEER

Strong and rich

Zona Rosa

Feel free to use the jarred version, but as cherries are in season right now, you should try Vida Tequila's Mexican-accented recipe for homemade Maraschino cherries.

Ingredients

- 2½ oz. Vida Anejo tequila
- ¾ oz. sweet vermouth
- ¼ oz. Maraschino cherry juice (from a jar or recipe below)
- Maraschino cherries

Directions

▶ Add all ingredients to a shaker with ice and stir 33 times. Pour into a chilled martini glass and garnish with cherries.

Homemade Maraschino Cherries

▶ Fill a glass jar with pitted fresh cherries. Fill to cover with equal parts simple syrup and Maraschino liqueur. For every cup of cherries, add the juice of ½ lime. Seal and refrigerate for up to two months.

VIDA TEQUILA

Tart and refreshing

Corny Son-of-a-Gun

Real American hero Nathan DeWitt of Tampa's Mise en Place created this cocktail to pair with grilled corn-on-the-cob.

Ingredients

- 1½ oz. Hudson corn whiskey
- ½ oz. lemon juice
- ½ oz. corn jelly
- 2 dashes bitters
- lemon peel

Directions

▶ Add ingredients to an iced shaker. Shake vigorously and strain into a Mason jar filled with ice. Garnish with lemon peel.

JULIA ROSE FOWLER

Fourth of July tunes!

Songza the red, white and blue

Songza co-founder Peter Asbill says that the Fourth of July is his favorite holiday.

"Nothing else comes close," he says before reconsidering briefly. "I mean Thanksgiving comes close, I really like that, but just the combination of the summer and barbecue and fireworks, it's perfect for me."

There's one other element that always enters into the equation, and that's music.

For the Fourth, the Songza team has put together three separate playlists for three totally different listening experiences. There's the big bombastic brass of "Stars and Stripes Forever!" which features classic patriotic marches and fanfare; there's "Heartland America," which gives listeners some of their favorite denim-clad rockers like Springsteen, Seger and Mellencamp; and there's "Patriotic Country" which is exactly what it sounds like.

Asbill says that this latter list is already attracting two very different types of listeners.

"You either have to be really into that kind of country music, and there's obviously a lot of people who are, and it's great," he says, "or you have to be really into the irony of being into that kind of country music."

Each playlist is more than three and a half hours long.

PAT HEALY

— Songza is a streaming platform that mines years of music history and today's music blogs for the best gems, so you don't have to. The company, which calls itself a music concierge service, offers thousands of expertly-curated playlists for free on the web, iPhone and iPad. Advice

Keep kids safe from Fourth of July fireworks

- Never let children play with fireworks of any type.
- View fireworks from at least 500 feet away.

GOODSHOOT

▶ Parents, protect your kids — and yourselves — from fireworks this holiday.

- Respect safety barriers set up to allow pyrotechnicians to do their jobs safely.
- If you find unexploded fireworks, do not touch them. Immediately contact your local fire or police departments.
- If you experience an eye injury during a fireworks accident, seek immediate help from an ophthalmologist.

Source: American Academy of Ophthalmology

Adults need to be safe, too

- Never buy or use illegal fireworks. Their quality cannot be assured.
- Never hold lighted fireworks with your hand or place them near the body.
- Wear safety eyewear, and always have water nearby.
- Soak used fireworks in water before discarding.
- Never try to relight a firework.
- If you are injured using fireworks, get help immediately.
- Never allow young children to play with or go near sparklers. They can reach temperatures of more than 1,000 degrees.
- Never handle fireworks if you are under the influence of drugs or alcohol.

Jennifer Hudson's new 'Lullaby'

The songstress puts her voice to good use when it's bedtime for her son How she keeps him grounded

When many people think of Jennifer Hudson's singing style, they think of a thunderous, room-shaking tone. But now, with her new Pampers-inspired adaptation of the classic "Lullaby and Goodnight," the multi-talented performer shows a gentler, sweeter side. We caught up with Hudson last week to discuss her new lullaby recording and how she balances being a mom and a superstar.

PAMPERS AND INVISION

▶ You can download Jennifer Hudson's take on "Lullaby and Goodnight" for free at www.facebook.com/pampers.

How did you incorporate your experiences as a mom into this lullaby?

[By] imagining putting my baby to sleep: What do you want to say to your child? What do you want them to hear before they fall asleep to soothe them, to calm them down? That's why I did it. Anytime he calls me, I say, "That's my baby." I always tell him, "I love your hugs," "I love your kisses." So, I really took it from being a mom, and the real experience of that.

Is it difficult balancing motherhood with your work life?

It can be. That's why I love being from Chicago and living in Chicago. After we had our son, we decided we wanted to go back home, because to me that's what keeps you grounded. That's what keeps the foundation. And then you have family there, which is what keeps something normal, at least for him. I wanted him to have as much of a normal childhood as possible, and I felt like that was the best way to do that — by going back home. And although he is always in my world and watching mommy work, and seeing daddy wrestling — that's different, that will always make him grow up different — if he still has that base, that foundation that we had growing up, then that, to us, is what's important.

"It's natural to be terrified, but it falls into place."
HUDSON, ON PARENTING

What advice do you have for new parents?

I remember when I first had my baby, I wanted all the guests to go home, but I was so terrified of being home alone with him. It's natural to be terrified, but it falls into place. You just fall into it.

Whose job is it anyway?

RE: "SOUNDING OFF ON HEALTH CARE": Mr. St. George, I frequently read your comments in Metro. While you do make some good points, the note you wrote appearing on July 2 is quite inaccurate.

I agree with your first point (it is not the president's job to create laws, that is the task of Congress); however, the rest of your prose is a typical anti-federal government rant based on how you personally believe our government is supposed to govern.

ACA is not unconstitutional. The Supreme Court ruled it did not violate the Constitution, hence the law is constitutional. The U.S. Federal Government has been involved in health care for nearly a century. You seem to be perpetuating a state's rights argument that was settled when we abandoned the Articles of Confederation, and then settled again during the Civil War. I have a history degree, and have worked in the health care industry for much of my life. Most of your arguments are based on conjecture, rather than substance. Also: Romney stated he would "repeal Obamacare on day one," which, as president, he would not have the power to do (again, a congressional task).

DOUG PORRELL, VIA E-MAIL

Pack your bags, we need coverage

Romney's potential choice for V.P. Marco Rubio said that there was a big difference between Romney's health care plan and Obama's. Romney's was on a state level; if you didn't like it you could move to a different state. Really? Sell the house, quit your job, pack up the kids and move to where they DON'T have health insurance? What a plan. Right now, more than 60 percent of bankruptcies in our country are due to runaway medical bills! "Obamacare" puts an end to that! Republicans think affordable, quality health care is a privilege. Wrong, it's a fundamental human right!

ROBERT LA ROSA, WHITESTONE, N.Y.

Unlocking the issue of 'job lock'

The Affordable Care Act frees an employee from "job lock," the reluctance to voluntarily terminate employment for fear of losing health care benefits, particularly if one has a preexisting condition. Now, it will take more than company health insurance to hold a valuable, experienced employee who should be better paid or better treated.

GLENN HAYES, KEW GARDENS, N.Y.

The right to bear flags, wherever

RE: "FLAGS ARE FOR FLYING, NOT WEARING": On the contrary, wearing printed images of the U.S. flag on clothing simply reflects the spirit of Independence Day. There is nothing unpatriotic or disrespectful about showing your pride in being American; wear what you feel, you have the freedom of choice and no one has the authority to dictate what not to wear. Go ahead, proudly wear your patriotic prints or red white and blue colors. Celebrate your freedom, and show your love for the USA. M. KOZYRA, VIA E-MAIL

Horoscope

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. If you are overly insistent about having your way, it will arouse similar instincts in those with whom you have one-on-one dealings. A deadlock could become inevitable.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. You're a considerate individual who is always happy to be helpful when you can. However, this noble characteristic is likely to be absent at present unless there is something in it for you.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. It's best to abide by the will of the majority, even when you are inclined to do otherwise. Don't be the only person in the group who is out of step.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Beware of a tendency to make your desired objectives far more difficult than they actually are. It's smart to always seek out the line of least resistance.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. If you're not careful, discussions on politics or principles could quickly become volatile. Be extremely mindful of this if you encounter someone who holds opposing views.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Before assuming any new indebtedness at this point in time, it is much wiser to take care of your old obligations first. Don't let yourself get boxed in by old bills.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Persons who are in accord with your way of doing things will find you to be a very pleasant individual to be around. Those who do things differently aren't likely to agree.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Arrange your schedule to be able to do everything in the easiest way possible, because you aren't likely to work too well under pressure. Being methodical in your actions would be a great first step.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Be your own person, especially if you find yourself involved with certain individuals whose standards don't measure up to yours.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. An old, unresolved problem that always causes turmoil within the household might rear its ugly head again. If it does manifest, don't contribute to the hostilities.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. You won't be in the mood for having others tell you what to do. To help prevent such a thing, refrain from foisting your opinions on others.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. A powerful desire for self-gratification could be far more prevalent in you than usual, so you might have to be careful to avoid greediness when it comes to what you want.

Denmark's the spot

You may be tempted to compare Copenhagen to Amsterdam, with its relaxed, bohemian attitude and artistic vibe Or to Paris, with its leisurely outdoor cafes and meandering side streets Or even to Venice with its scenic canals and waterfront focus But this welcoming Nordic city has a personality all its own Ride a bike through the city to check out these spots

ALL PHOTOS BY CONNIE MARIA WESTERGAARD

▶ Dating back to the late 1600s, Nyhavn is still a bustling waterfront area of Copenhagen.

To see:

You can't visit Copenhagen without a trip to Tivoli Gardens. It might be tempting to dismiss it as a mere amusement park, but the Danes hold it near to their hearts. The Gardens became a point of national pride after the Germans bombed it in World War II. Even today, or so the legend goes, many of the light fixtures here face down, so anyone flying above cannot see the park is operating.

The Gardens are a quirky, eclectic mix. There's a concert stage and a grassy meadow, roller coasters and rides. There are also plenty of quiet, serene flowery spots to sit and relax. Eating options range from the quick — popcorn and hot dogs (the Danes are mad about hot dogs!) — to the very formal.

The cost:

Many American tourists have said they find Denmark pricey. A good thing to note is that tips are generally included in both taxi fare and restaurant bills.

Traveling there during the first quarter of the year, January through March, may be cheaper. You can also check out the Wondercool winter festival in February, which celebrates Copenhagen jazz.

Also consider purchasing the Copenhagen Card. The card gets you free travel on mass transit, as well as car rental. The card also gives you free entry to more than 60 museums and attractions, including Tivoli Gardens. They are available in 24- or 72-hour increments and can be purchased at most hotels.

CARLY BALDWIN
carly.baldwin@metro.us

To do:

An absolute must when visiting Denmark is to rent bikes and see the city the way most Danes do: on two wheels. People ride bikes in Copenhagen the way they do cars or the subway elsewhere: to get to work in the morning, to pick up the kids from day care in the afternoon and to dinner parties at night. In fact, it's not uncommon to see a woman in an elegant dress and four-inch heels pedaling past.

Bike rental shops abound — but if you don't want to pay the few dollars for a rental, take advantage of the city's longtime bike share. It's completely free!

Ride your bikes to see the obligatory Danish tourist attraction — The Little Mermaid statue, with the harbor waters lapping at her unassuming perch. The creation by sculptor Edvard Eriksen is indeed very cute, and a testament to the country's revered writer Hans Christian Anderson; he wrote the beloved fairy tale that most Americans know from the Disney movie. But do check out the uglier — and we think cooler — version. A deconstructed interpretation of The Little Mermaid — Danes call her "the genetically modified mermaid" — has been created by Bjorn Norgaard and is a short bike ride away in the Osterbro neighborhood.

▶ Stroget is bustling with people on bikes.

▶ BioMio is popular in Copenhagen's meatpacking district.

To eat:

There has been a food revolution in Denmark, where the emphasis is on cooking with fresh, local ingredients.

Those who follow food and dining trends have likely heard of Rene Redzipi, the head chef at Noma who led the way in locavore dining. But if you can't get a table at Noma (the wait list can be two months) don't despair, there are plenty of other options.

Try Manfreds & Vin in Jaegersborggade. This is a hip but relaxed restaurant in what is like the Brooklyn of Copenhagen. The salad is topped with a few slivers of pickled onion and dressing and the taste is spicy, tangy, sweet and bitter depending on which green you bite.

BioMio in the meatpacking district is another tasty vegetable-heavy restaurant.

Even though veggies are highlighted in many of the dishes anywhere in Denmark, vegetarians should be warned: Expect lots of fish, sausage and cured meats. (Our mouth is still watering from a dish at a restaurant called Nose2Tail: little pink caviar called lumpfish roe, creme fraiche and lots of fresh dill.)

Try smorebrod while there; it's the longstanding Danish combo of brown bread smeared with butter and then topped with meats or smoked fish.

There are times when it's OK to stay at the jail or the monastery

Everyone likes a bit of variety. What better way to try out something new on vacation than by staying in an old monastery or a former school that has been reborn as a luxurious hotel? Members and editors of travel website Virtualtourist.com have compiled their own list of Top Converted Hotels. Here's a look at the Top 3:

Mandarin Oriental, Prague
Prague, Czech Republic
Prague's most atmospheric walks are in the Mala Strana neighborhood. One of these unique buildings is the Mandarin Oriental, housed in a converted Dominican monastery from the 14th century. Even the hotel group's signature holistic spa experience is set in an area of architectural heritage. The spa's entry, a glass walkway, both displays and preserves the remnants of a Gothic church found during the hotel's renovation. A stroll around the Mala Strana will give guests ample opportunities to indulge in the city's famous brews and hear some splendid classical tunes.

The Liberty Hotel
Boston, Massachusetts
A gray stone structure emerges at the Boston side of the Longfellow Bridge, harkening back to a time far before the Massachusetts General Hospital and Red Line MBTA rail were the major players in this area. The looming facade belongs to the Liberty Hotel, now a popular playground for adults, but it's also the former home to the Charles Street Jail. The enormous atrium is beautifully preserved, the lighting fixtures providing a modern aesthetic with a historical slant. The architecture of the former jail has been brilliantly reconceived as an urban one-stop shop: The nightclub is in the former "drunk tank," cocktail areas occupy the surviving catwalks and two different eateries can be found in rooms with original jail cell details. A Virtual tourist.com member noted that the location, once ideal for preventing prisoner escapes, is now very convenient for exploring Boston: Stroll around Beacon Hill, cab to Newbury Street or take the Red Line to Cambridge.

NICOLAUS CZARNEKCI/METRO

▶ The Liberty Hotel in Boston is quite, er, um, captivating.

La Purificadora
Puebla, Mexico
One of the first projects to serve as a catalyst for the converted hotel trend is La Purificadora in Puebla, Mexico. The city of Puebla, located 62 miles east of Mexico City, was one of the most important colonial cities in Mexico. It served as the site for the significant victory over France that established the Cinco de Mayo holiday. Unlike the majority of converted hotels that are housed in refurbished palaces, monasteries or convents, the structure housing La Purificadora was born in 1884 as an ice factory. The archeologists and architects kept the building's original use in mind when designing the hotel — incorporating clear glass, pools and open spaces — and allowing the adjacent church of St. Francis to be seen from almost any public area of the hotel. Howard hopes lie with Nets

Magic center Dwight Howard apparently only has eyes for Brooklyn.

The All-Star spoke to Yahoo! Sports yesterday and said he was only interested in playing for one team.

"There's only one team on my list and if I don't get traded there, I'll play the season out and explore my free agency after that," Howard said.

Given the rumors dogging Howard for months, that one team appears to be the Nets, even though he wouldn't specify.

The Nets would certainly like to add the perennial All-Star, which would likely entice Deron Williams into re-signing, but they don't have many pieces to trade. Brook Lopez has dealt with multiple injuries and the team has just five players under contract. METRO

Devils legend will stay in Newark for next two years ◆ Signs for $9 million ◆ Parise decision expected soon

The greatest Devil of them all, Martin Brodeur, will remain with the only NHL franchise he has ever known.

Brodeur and the Devils agreed to a two-year deal worth $9 million yesterday morning.

"At the end of the day, this is what I wanted all along," Brodeur said in a midday conference call with reporters. "It was important to make the right decision for me.

"It wasn't about money. It was [about] security. I'll be ready to honor [the contract] physically and mentally."

During the conference call, he said that the Devils had offered a one-year deal which prompted Brodeur to hire super agent Pat Brisson — who represents, among others, Sidney Crosby, the Sedin twins, Evgeni Malkin, John Tavares, Jonathan Toews, Patrick Kane and Claude Giroux — on Friday to assist in his first foray into unrestricted free agency.

While he would not name the franchises that presented contracts to him, Brodeur reported that "every team [offered a] two-year deal. [We] had no interest in a one-year deal. My agent, Pat, talked to other teams. We did entertain offers. We got other offers. There were offers out there that were a lot different."

Brodeur hinted that the Devils' financial issues may have played a role in the one-year offer. The Devils are $200 million in debt and had to accept a loan from the league last season.

Brodeur was also pleased that the Devils agreed to a two-year contract totaling $2.8 million for backup goaltender Johan Hedberg. Hedberg compiled a 32-19-4 record with a 2.08 goals against average, .915 save percentage and seven shutouts in 61 games over the last two seasons. He went 17-7-2 with a 2.22 GAA and .918 save percentage along with four shutouts last year.

"Brings stability to the back end," Brodeur said of his partnership with Hedberg. "[It's] nice to count on somebody to [be able to] keep me fresh. [It is a] good set up."

Devils' Parise weighs offers from teams

While the Devils are set in goal for the next two years, they, like the rest of the NHL, are waiting to hear from Zach Parise. The Devils' captain was reviewing offers yesterday.

"Zach is a priority [for] the Devils. He is a franchise player. He worked very hard, played very well for us," Brodeur said. "I talked to him a lot [on Sunday] and talked to him [yesterday] morning. Will talk to him later.

"The decision is so hard," Brodeur added. "[It's a] tough decision for him."

Brodeur said at the end of the season he would like to see Parise return to the club next season. The Penguins and Blackhawks are reportedly also interested.

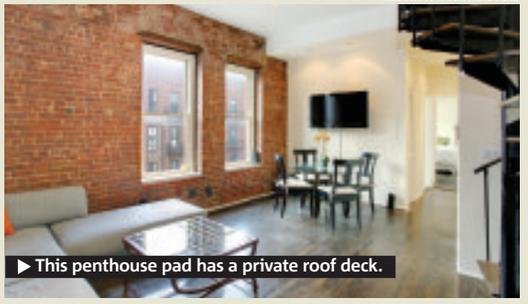
Residential deals

Three brokers give us the play-by-play on how their clients found and closed on their new homes You have to be aggressive to land the apartment of your dreams in NYC

ALL PHOTOS: THE REAL DEAL

East Village

Cindy Scholz, Citi Habitats
$951,000
203 E. 13th St., PH4B
One-bedroom, one-bath, 715-square-foot prewar condo unit in the Kiehl's Building; apartment has private roof deck, washer/dryer, security system; common charges $448 per month, taxes $474 per month; asking price $949,000; one week on the market. (Brokers: Jon Amundsen, the Corcoran Group; Cindy Scholz, Citi Habitats)



▶ This penthouse pad has a private roof deck.

"I represented myself in this deal. I was looking for a condo, and the condo market is really tight. I had shown this apartment to clients three years ago, [when it was listed for] $1.3 million. When it came back on the market listed at $949,000, I asked if I could see it that day, and the broker said, 'You have to come to the open house.' It's an old loft-style unit with a huge private roof deck, and definitely the private roof space is what got me. The maintenance was low, too. Everyone at the open house was on the phone with their parents, their significant others. I said right away, 'I'll take it,' and I paid a couple grand over. The building did have some issues, like a low cash-reserve fund, which meant I had to put 35 percent down. The mortgage process took over two months, and the situation was extremely stressful. The amount of paperwork they requested was just unreal. The seller was patient. He was in a lot of financial trouble, so he just had to let this apartment go."

Upper East Side

Evelyn Katz, Fox Residential
$1.9 million
327 E. 82nd St., Apt. 2
Three-bedroom, two-bath, 1,830-square-foot duplex condo; apartment has private garden, eat-in kitchen, fireplace; common charges $500 per month, taxes $600 per month; asking price $1.6 million; three and a half weeks on the market. (Brokers: Susan Kane and Jaar-mel Sloane, Sloane Square NYC; Evelyn Katz, Fox Residential Group)

▶ The bright living room at 327 E. 82nd St. boasts a fireplace.

"The unit is the parlor floor and first floor of a prewar townhouse, plus a basement. When it came on the market, there were about 150 people calling. There aren't many condo townhouse properties, and this one has a private garden. The seller had paid about $2.2 million; they bought it five years ago. It was first shown on a Sunday, and by midweek we had an accepted offer. But then it was retracted because people were bidding it up. [My buyer] said, 'I will outbid [the highest bidder] by $100,000.' There were a few issues, like work permits that weren't closed out by the city from the prior owner doing renovations. But my [client] closed fast for all cash." GUELDA VOIEN

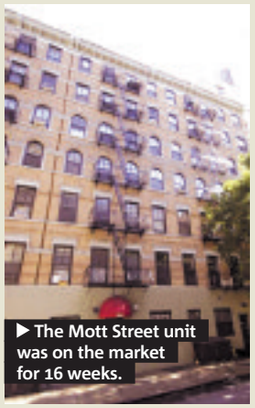
NoHo

Bridget Schuy, Bond New York
$636,000
308 Mott St., Apt. 1D
One-bedroom, one-bath, 750-square-foot unit in a prewar co-op; eat-in kitchen, washer/dryer, custom closets; common charges $1,618 per month; asking price $669,000; 16 weeks on the market. (Broker: Bridget Schuy, Bond New York)



▶ The Mott Street unit was on the market for 16 weeks.

"The buyer called me on the fly and I just happened to be in the apartment. He is a bachelor in the finance industry and he had been looking about three months. He fell so in love with the apartment, he was like, 'Can I buy the furniture?' The sellers were a couple who had worked on the unit together, put it all together carefully, including some custom furniture and some very tasteful art. So when they knew the buyer shared their aesthetic and appreciated the furnishings, it endeared him to them. The sellers were moving out of state, [and] the buyer wound up getting all the furniture. As far as financing, the buyer used Wells Fargo — he was preapproved, even — but it was cumbersome. There were a lot of tedious documents."

What we're into

Now: Design blog backlash

Take a good look around your space. Is there a terrarium perched atop a pile of vintage suitcases? Maybe some antlers mounted on a chalkboard-painted wall? How about a frame cluster? If you answered yes to any of the above and/or even considered storing knick-knacks in Mason jars, you may be suffering from an overdose of indie design blogs. For a proper diagnosis, visit www.f—yournoguchi coffeetable.tumblr.com (you'll have to spell that first expletive out), a hilarious parody of the hypercurated spaces featured on Apartment Therapy-style blogs.

All summer: Barbecue garden

Design-forward home goods company black+blum is behind this crafty, space-saving grill. By day, it masquerades as a terra cotta pot full of herbs. By evening, it pops its top off to reveal a stainless steel cooking surface.
